ABSTRACT

The observed and interpolated temperature and salinity data plus the computed sigma-t, geopotential anomalies, and sound velocities are presented for 202 oceanographic stations occupied during thirteen Coast Guard cruises to Ocean Station DELTA (centered at 44°00'N, 41°00'W) between 27 August 1967 and 25 August 1968. The surface layer (300 m) at OS DELTA is characterized by a complex structure because of the proximity of the North Atlantic Current and seasonal atmospheric variations.

INTRODUCTION

Initial Coast Guard investigations on Ocean Station DELTA (OS DELTA), located at 44°00'N, 41°00'W, began during a one month cruise in April 1963 aboard the USCGC CASCO. Eighty oceanographic stations were taken to determine the spatial or temporal variations of temperature and salinity in the upper 800 meters. McGary and Morse (1964) concluded that the boundaries of several distinct water masses occur near OS DELTA and lead to large horizontal gradients in temperature and salinity distribution.

Experiments were conducted during five three-week cruises by the U.S. Naval Oceanographic Office (June 1962–July 1963) to determine the vertical and horizontal variability of water properties in the immediate vicinity of OS DELTA. Analyses of these data were presented by Corton (1967) in which the water masses at OS DELTA were described as: (1) the surface water mass of Gulf Stream origin which varies in thickness from 475 meters to 800 meters, (2) an intermediate water mass of cold water of subarctic origin (with a small percentage of Mediterranean Water between 800 meters and 1000 meters) which extends to a depth of approximately 1750 meters, (3) a deep mass of North Atlantic Deep Water between 1750 meters and 2750 meters, and (4) a bottom water mass below 2750 meters, distinctive of Newfoundland Basin Water (2.3°–3.0°C, 34.90‰–34.96‰).

The U.S. Coast Guard initiated a continuing series of oceanographic observations at OS DELTA in July 1966. Due to a limited number of deep sea reversing thermometers, these observations were restricted to alternate three-week cruises during the first twelve months. Husby (1969) reported on the data obtained from 136 oceanographic stations during the period from July 1966 to August 1967; he pointed out significant fluctuations in temperature and salinity caused by changes in the North Atlantic Current near OS DELTA.

This report describes conditions based on 202 oceanographic stations at OS DELTA from 27 August 1967 to 25 August 1968. A summary of oceanographic operations during that period is presented in Table 1. Nansen casts were taken daily during the occupation of OS DELTA unless terminated by weather or other mission responsibilities. In addition, casts using a salinity-temperature-depth sensor system (STD) were conducted on OS DELTA for the first time (6 July to 9 July 1968) by USCGC HAMILTON.

SAMPLING TECHNIQUES

Ocean station vessels attempt to maintain their position within a ten mile square centered on the ocean station, although extenuating circumstances occasionally prevent this. The station position sheets (figs. 3–15) indicate those stations occupied outside the ten mile square.

The sampling program at OS DELTA consisted of daily Nansen bottle casts to a depth of 1,500 m when weather and other operations permitted. The desired sampling depths were surface, 25 m, 50 m, 75 m, 100 m, 150 m, 200 m, 300 m, 400 m, 500 m; 600 m, 800 m, 1,000 m, and 1,500 m. However, the first three cruises during the period covered in this report did not sample at 75 m; instead they included a 1,250 m sample. For deep casts, the desired depths were 2,000 m, 2,500 m, 3,000 m, 3,500 m, 4,000 m, and 150 m and 50 m off the bottom. Attempts were made to complete at least one deep cast during each patrol.

A pair of protected deep sea reversing thermometers was fitted on each Nansen bottle. Four or five bottles at 200 m and below were each fitted with an unprotected thermometer for the thermometric determination of the sampling depths. Field observations of temperature were transmitted via radioteletype to the Coast Guard Oceanographic Unit for real time data processing and quality control. The reductions to in situ temperatures were accomplished with the use of a Digital Equipment Corporation PDP-5 computer.

Salinity samples were drawn from each Nansen bottle, and salinity values were determined at sea using an inductive salinometer. Duplicate samples were drawn from the top and bottom bottles of each cast and were analyzed by the Oceanographic Unit for quality control.

Processed temperature and salinity data for each cruise were submitted to the National Oceanographic Data Center (NODC), Washington, D.C. The interpolated temperatures, salinities, sigma-t values, geopotential anomalies, and sound velocities for the standard depths were computed by NODC and are listed in Tables I through XIII of Appendix A.

ANALYSIS OF DATA

OS DELTA provides an opportunity to investigate the surface (600 m) effects of a shifting current regime which separates the Subarctic Water mass to the north and the North Atlantic Central Water mass to the south. Prior to discussion of this system, a brief description of the influencing current and water masses is provided.

Northern Gulf Stream Extension

Just off the Tail of the Banks (43°N, 51°W) the eastward flowing Gulf Stream develops large fluctuations in stream position as it migrates northeastward. Iselin (1936) defined these fluctuations as an extension of the Gulf Stream called the North Atlantic Current. He traced the position of the current by examining the 10°C isothermal surface (fig. 16). The steep gradients east of 50°W define the North Atlantic Current.

Dietrich (1964) continued this analysis and called the geographic location of the 10°C isotherm at 200 m the North Atlantic Current boundary (Polar Front). This boundary separates cold, low-saline, subpolar water and warm, high-saline, subtropical water. The variations in the position of the front are shown in figure 17 (Dietrich, 1964). Fluctuations of the North Atlantic Current as determined by maximum cross current temperature gradients are shown in figure 18 (Fuglister and Worthington, 1951).

Information provided by Boisvert (1967) indicates that the North Atlantic Current is a rather sluggish and slow moving regime (<1.0 kt) subject to the effects of shallow, wind driven surface movement known as North Atlantic Drift (Stommel, 1966).

Due to wide seasonal variations and the limited amount of available data for the North Atlantic Current, exact limits of temperature and salinity distribution cannot be clearly described. However, Corton (1967) indicates that a high salinity core (35.6‰–36.2‰) exists at approximately 100 m. Temperatures at this depth vary between 16° and 17°C (Pub. No. 700, 1967).

Contributing Water Masses

The North Atlantic Current provides a dynamic boundary between two distinct water masses which are displaced and positioned along this boundary as a function of the current velocity and shape of developing meanders. The predominant water mass to the south has been designated North Atlantic Central Water (NACW) (4°–17°C, 35.10‰–36.29‰) (Sverdrup, et al. 1942, Defant, 1961). Corton (1967) has estimated this water to extend from the surface to approximately 600 m in the vicinity of OS DELTA. Subarctic Water (3°–5°C, 34.7‰–34.9‰) to the north of this boundary is the dominant water mass from the surface to 1,750 m (Corton, 1967). However the observed characteristics at OS DELTA (8°–23°C, 35.10‰–36.70‰) indicate a regime whose physical properties are, at times, influenced by the North Atlantic Current. This influence was especially noticeable during the summer months when the wind mixed layer was at a minimum thickness.

The intermediate water at OS DELTA (600–1,750 m) was formed by the mixing of Subarctic Water with the more saline water transported by a northwestern fan of the Mediterranean effluent. The lower limit of this intermediate water mass can be identified by a salinity of 34.92‰ and has been estimated to be at a depth of 1,750 m in the vicinity of OS DELTA (Corton, 1967).

Table 2 summarizes and compares the various water masses found in the vicinity of OS DELTA. T-S diagrams of the data collected at OS DELTA emphasize these water masses and point out the effects of seasonal variation (figs. 19–23).

Seasonal Variations

The observations made at OS DELTA indicated the existence of a seasonal upper layer separated from the non-seasonal layer at about 300 m as can be seen from the vertical distribution of temperature (figs. 26–38). A permanent thermocline (approximately 1.5°C/100 m) existed from a depth of 300 m to 800 m. The temperature then decreased from 6°C at 800 m through the intermediate water mass to  $4^{\circ}\text{C} \pm 0.3^{\circ}\text{C}$ . A seasonal isothermal layer was present from late October through early May (figs. 28–33), with a maximum depth of 300 m observed in early March. This isothermal feature was caused by the erosion and deepening of the seasonal thermocline which was influenced by increased convection due to cooling temperatures and wind mixing. A time-series plot is presented in figure 24 in support of the discussions of temporal variations in temperature.

The upper seasonal layer displayed maximum surface temperatures and stratification during the autumnal equinox; the minimum temperatures and the deepest thermocline erosion (isothermal layer) coincided with the vernal equinox.

The salinity structure (fig. 25) of the upper seasonal zone followed a trend similar to that of the temperature. An isohaline layer developed in December, with a maximum depth of 300 m occurring in early March, and was followed by the establishment of a halocline in May. This seasonal halocline blended into the permanent halocline which extended down to about 700 m. The intermediate water (600–1,750 m) maintained a nearly constant salinity range of 34.92‰–35.00‰.

The vertical distribution of salinity for each cruise is shown in figures 39–51. The salinity maximum located at 100 m from August to December (figs. 39–42, 51 and Table 3) may have been an intrusion of the North Atlantic Current. The greater mixing forces that occurred during the months from January to May eroded this prominent feature into an isohaline layer (to approximately 300m) with only an occasional maximum at greater depths. This seems to indicate that the mixing processes were of sufficient magnitude to destroy any changes that could be brought about by intrusions from the North Atlantic Current.

Table 3 summarizes the variations of the predominant characteristics of salinity in the upper 800 m at OS DELTA.

Description of Observed Processes

Observations made in a limited geographical area over a relatively short period (one year) do not lend themselves to a comprehensive analysis of physical processes. However, it was possible to observe changes in physical properties at OS DELTA due to the variation in position and intensity of the North Atlantic Current.

Comparison of the physical properties of OS DELTA was made with those observed for Standard Section A–3 (SSA3) (Robe, 1971) in an attempt to determine the geographic relation between OS DELTA and the Polar Front. Only three dates were comparable (due to limited observations on the eastern end of SSA3): 4 November 1967, 3 February 1968, and 5 August 1968. During those times the Front was located 255, 285, and 200 nautical miles, respectively, west of OS DELTA.

It would be difficult to make an estimate of the Front's distance to the north of OS DELTA, due to a lack of data in that direction. However, at no time did the observed water characteristics indicate that the Front had traveled southward through OS DELTA. Passage of the Front or traverse of a large eddy would be marked by a sudden decrease of temperature and salinity due to the influx of Subarctic Water.

The influence of the North Atlantic Current, as it varies in strength and distance from OS DELTA, can be monitored by a change in the physical properties of the water in the vicinity of OS DELTA. Data gathered from stations occupied during the period covered by this report have been investigated for significant temporal variations as an indication of the influence of the North Atlantic Current.

Attention is directed to the USCGC HAM-ILTON cruise of 6–9 July 1968 (figs. 36 and 49) and specifically to stations 5, 9, and 13, separated by intervals of 23.5 and 30.2 hours. Station five showed the reduced influence of North Atlantic Central Water (NACW), possibly due to an increase in intensity and/or a southeast movement of the North Atlantic Current. An apparent return of NACW was registered during occupation of station 13.

Observations made during the cruise of the USCGC INGHAM (figs. 26 and 39) at stations 2, 3, and 4 showed temperature and salinity values indicative of NACW. Station 7, four days later, indicated temperature and salinity minima in the upper 800 meters as the Polar Front shifted position towards OS DELTA.

Similar distributions of properties were observed during the September 1967 cruise of USCGC CHINCOTEAGUE (figs. 27 and 40), May 1968 cruise of USCGC DALLAS (figs. 34 and 47), March 1968 cruise of USCGC ABSECON (figs. 32 and 45), and July 1968 cruise of USCGC DALLAS (figs. 37 and 50).

Due to relatively few "off station" casts, little can be evaluated concerning horizontal variations in physical properties. Separations were limited to 70 nautical miles in latitude with corresponding temperature and salinity differences of  $1.0^{\circ}\text{C}$  and  $0.5\text{‰}$  in the upper 50 m. Variations in temperature and salinity were not observed with longitudinal differences of up to 90 nautical miles.

The physical properties observed at OS DELTA and those of the surrounding water masses can best be compared by examining the observations made at OS DELTA, OS ECHO, OS CHARLIE, and selected stations along SSA3 (fig. 1). Observations at OS CHARLIE describe the water masses peculiar to the subarctic; properties observed at OS ECHO detail NACW characteristics, and observations along SSA3 provide insight into properties unique to the North Atlantic Current.

Comparison of temperature and salinity vertical distributions at the above locations was made for February and August 1968 (figs. 52 and 53).

Data from SSA3 and OS DELTA exhibit isohaline/isothermal layers down to about 100 m during February, with the greater depths displaying similar trends in their distributions. The nearly uniform distribution of Subarctic Water (especially at OS DELTA, OS CHARLIE, and SSA3) below 800 m becomes clear and is supported by the close coincidence of temperature and salinity vertical distributions.

During August, observations at SSA3 and OS DELTA showed similar characteristics of temperature and salinity versus depth, with the formation of definite thermoclines and haloclines down to 100 m. As is typical of subarctic zones, salinity increases slightly with depth at OS DELTA and SSA3, but maximum salinities are observed at the surface of OS ECHO (subtropic location).

Codes Utilized

A complete description of the codes utilized in the tabulation of oceanographic station data can be found in National Oceanographic Data Center publication M-2, Processing Physical and Chemical Data from Oceanographic Stations. (Rev. August 1964, supplement issued May 1966.)

To facilitate use of the oceanographic station data listing, entry headings which are not self-explanatory are described below.

| Depth to Bottom . . . . .   | Uncorrected sounding in meters.  |
| Max. Depth of Samples . . . | Depth of deepest sample to nearest multiple of one hundred meters.   |
| Wave observations           |  |
| DIR. . . . .                | Rounded to nearest multiple of 10 degrees.   |
| HGT. . . . .                | Increments of 1/2 m. Sum of 5 meters plus increments of 1/2 m if 50 is added to direction.   |
| PER. . . . .                | If numerals 2 through 9 are entered, period in seconds is twice the numeric entry or 2X (numeric entry) +1. For other entries see WMO Code 3155. |
| SEA . . . . .               | Sea state according to WMO Code 3700   |
| Weather Code . . . . .      | If preceded by X, weather according to WMO Code 4501. If a two-digit entry, weather according to WMO Code 4677.                                  |
| Cloud Code                  |  |
| Type . . . . .              | Cloud type according to WMO Code 0500.   |
| Amount . . . . .            | Cloud amount in eighths. Entry of the numeral 9 indicates cloud amount could not be estimated.   |
| Water                       |  |
| Color Code . . . . .        | Color according to Forel-Ule scale.  |
| Trans. . . . .              | Transparency in whole meters as determined by Secchi disc.   |
| Wind                        |  |
| Dir. . . . .                | Rounded to nearest multiple of 10 degrees.   |
| Speed . . . . .             | Letter S indicates wind speed in knots.  |
| Barometer . . . . .         | Barometric pressure given in tens, units and tenths of millibars.  |
| Air Temp. °C . . . . .      | Air temperature to tenths of a degree Celsius.   |
| Vis. Code . . . . .         | Visibility according to WMO Code 4300.   |
| No. obs. depths . . . . .   | Number of observed levels associated with the station.   |

| Messenger time . . . . .                       | Entered in hours and tenths of an hour GMT. For Nansen casts, indicates time of release of messenger applicable to the observational level. For STD casts, indicates the starting time of lowering the sensor.  |
| Card type . . . . .                            | OBS designates observed levels. STD indicates the values at this standard level were interpolated by a modified 3-point LaGrange formula.   |
| Depth (m) . . . . .                            | Depth to nearest meter. A postscript T indicates depth was obtained therometrically; Z indicates uncorrected "wire out" depth. Postscript Q indicates value was marked doubtful by originator; P indicates value was considered doubtful by NODC. Postscripts P and Q retain this meaning throughout the following entries. |
| T °C . . . . .                                 | Temperature to hundredths of a degree Celsius.  |
| S ‰ . . . . .                                  | Salinity in parts-per-thousand.   |
| SIGMA-T . . . . .                              | Entered to hundredths.  |
| Specific-volume . . . . .                      | Multiply entry by $10^{-7}$ to obtain specific-volume anomaly in cubic centimeters per gram.  |
| $\Sigma \Delta$ Dyn. M $\times 10^3$ . . . . . | Multiply entry by $10^{-3}$ to obtain anomaly of dynamic depth in dynamic meters referenced to the sea surface.   |
| Sound Velocity . . . . .                       | Sound velocity according to Wilson's formula entered to tenths of a meter per second.   |
